LA Hacks + Base44

Company Challenge - Base44: Build Something People Want

Hacker Starter Pack here→ https://base-builder-launch.base44.app/

Ideas are easy. Building something useful is harder.

Your challenge is to identify a real problem, opportunity, or unmet need—and use Base44 to turn your idea into a working product before the weekend ends.

We're looking for more than a clever demo. Build something with a clear user, a reason to exist, and enough functionality that someone could actually use it.

Your product could help students navigate campus life, make a frustrating workflow disappear, help a small business operate better, create an entirely new consumer experience, tackle a social challenge, or solve a problem we haven't imagined yet.

Start with the problem. Build the solution. Put it in someone's hands.

What We're Looking For

- A problem worth solving — You can clearly explain the need or opportunity you identified and who experiences it.
- A working product — Your core experience actually works and demonstrates more than a static concept or mockup.
- Thoughtful product decisions — What you built reflects the needs of your intended user, not simply what's technically possible.
- Creative use of Base44 — You've used the platform to turn an ambitious idea into something real within the hackathon.
- Evidence of learning — Show us what you discovered while building. User feedback, testing, iteration, or a meaningful pivot are all welcome.
- Potential beyond the weekend — We can understand how the product could grow, find users, or create value if you kept building.

Submission Requirements

Your project must be built substantially using Base44 and include:

- A live, working Base44 application
- A short description of the problem, user, and solution

- A brief explanation of what you learned or changed while building
- Your standard LA Hacks demo/submission materials
